SAVVY ROSE

A stock of trendy threads and accessories might be what draws shoppers to Savvy Rose, but it's the service that keeps 'em coming back. The staff is honest and friendly in dispensing style tips, and the game-day tunics, bold bangles ($18), and cozy knits appeal to moms and daughters alike. savvyroseboutique.com

SIMPLE TO SUBLIME

Drawn by ideas of sustainable living, Samantha Moore developed Simple to Sublime into the best stop in town for fair-trade clothing, shoes, and gift items such as South Carolina coasters ($25 for set of four). In addition to other brands, Samantha also sells her own line of natural beauty products, including body lotions, soaps, and facial cleansers for him and her. simplesublime.com

SOUTHERN BELLE EPOQUE

Dawn Warfield, an avid consignment shopper, moved to town four years ago and opened this trove of gently used styles. Patience is required to sift through the racks of like-new Lilly Pulitzer dresses, Kate Spade bags, and St. John sweaters ($195), but it's worth it for the thrill of the hunt. You might even walk out with an authentic Chanel bag for half of what you would normally pay. southernbelleepoque.com

A VERY LITTLE BOOKSTORE

Although it's tiny, this shop is mighty in its collection of titles for kids and young adults. To promote reading, owner Natalie Sober hosts story time on Tuesday and Friday mornings, in addition to a weekly book club for teens. Browse classic children's titles as well as works from local authors. averylittlebookstore.com

PEOPLE, PLACES, & QUILTS

For 25 years, Diane Frankenberger has attracted quilters with her dizzying array of colorful fabrics, patterns, and quilt kits ($50 for the one shown above), all stocked in a 6,000-square-foot space. Whether you're a master quilter or newly initiated into the craft, this emporium—complete with Australian, Asian, and 1800s-reproduction fabrics—will suit you just right. ppquilts.com
